Sweet Briar Season

Towards the end of every summer, Sweet Briar Season begins. It started slowly with only a few students returning to the quad to either settle in early or to help others get acquainted with the school. Although the August heat was unbearable, everyone was happy to be back. The shouts of excitement filled the dorms, as many saw each other for the first time in months. Sweet Briar Season was not like any other season because it lasted from late August to mid-May. It was during this season that six hundred women took part in expanding their knowledge, dreams, and expectations of the world around them. Guion began to hum with the sound of computers being clicked away on, cars began to fill the remote parking lots of Elijah and Glass, and gentlemen from both Hampden-Sydney and Washington and Lee began to wander the halls. These were just a few of the signals that let everyone know that Sweet Briar Season had begun.

The Season became long and grueling as the mountainside changed its colors. The cold snow and ice of winter left many Freshman stranded inside the dorms. They became fast friends during these days. The upperclassmen arrived back from their breaks, and so did the spring term. Seniors became anxious to graduate and under-classmen began to fill out fall schedules. The warmth of the air reminded everyone that the Season was almost over. Then it was. The cars arrived by the dozens, and the parking lots began to empty. One by one the laughter dwindled into tears as many said good-bye. The hallways became silent. The Season ended, but the friendships and memories did not, and once again, Sweet Briar awaited the beginning of another Season.

Resting outside of Glass during the season's worst ice storm, the bicycles endure the cold as their owners attempt to stay warm inside.

STUDENT LIFE

From traditions to weekend road -trips, from Prothero to the Bistro, there were always places to go, things to talk about, and people to see. The women who seemed to be isolated from any big city fun could always find some way to entertain themselves. The traditions played a large role in the lives of the women at Sweet Briar because it was their obligation to maintain and continue them. The parking lot was rarely full on weekends do to the desire to travel and have weekend adventures. Whether it was by partying at either W&L or H-SC, or by spending an afternoon sunbathing in the dell, there was always something to do and enjoy doing it.

Founders' Day

In the fall, about a month after classes have started, the entire student body and the faculty gather together to celebrate the founding of Sweet Briar College. Founders' Day is a time for everyone to look back at the past and to celebrate the future. It is also a time of beginnings. The freshmen are participating in their first event as Sweet Briar students and the seniors are wearing their robes for the first time. Traditionally, the main part of Founders' Day is the procession up to Monument Hill. At the cemetery, a prayer is said for the founders and flowers are placed on the graves of Daisy and her family.

This year the festivities were changed a little bit. It was the dedication of the new wing of the Guion Science Center which changed the normal order of events. This year the Sweet Briar community gathered inside the chapel for the convocation of Founders' Day and the Founders' Memorial dedication. Afterwards, the procession to Guion Science Center was led by the bagpipers with the seniors and their chosen sophomores or freshman following.

At Guion, the Samuel E. Upchurch Wing was dedicated by President Hill along with Ann Samford Upchurch '48 and her family. The sons, daughters, and grandchildren of Samuel Upchurch were also present to witness the speeches that marked his contributions to the community and the nation. Ann Samford Upchurch and Professor Susan Phiepho both gave speeches telling what this building and its dedication meant to them. The speeches were followed by tours of the new science classrooms and demonstrations of some of the equipment that Sweet Briar has for its students.

Many students stayed at Guion to see the new classrooms and the demonstrations the professors, and some of their students, provided. Professor Calle showed sunspots to interested observers outside the main building, and there was a demonstration of the electron microscope. Students could be seen all afternoon wandering through the halls, snack or drink in hand, seeing what there was to see. The pin-covered robe of a senior was a familiar sight.

The seniors could also be seen taking pictures with their friends on the lawn outside of Guion. This was the last Founders' Day that they would celebrate together. When they had lined up outside of the chapel before the festivities started many seniors seemed surprised to find that their final year at Sweet Briar was already here. Founders' Day was the first official occasion where the seniors would be seen as a class. It had been only three years ago that they had first witnessed this ceremony for the first time. As they had followed the sound of bagpipes towards Guion with their chosen sophomores walking beside them, the feeling that this was the start of a wonderful new year could be sensed everywhere.

As the afternoon progressed, small groups of seniors could be seen making their way up the hill to pay their respects to Daisy and her family. Even though the traditions of the past had been altered for the special dedication at Guion, the meaning behind Founders' Day was not lost.

Taking advantage of the privilege to sit on the Junior Bench, Sarah Reidy, Susan Perdue, Kathy May, Amy Biathrow, Katie Blaik, Kim Mounger, and Sarah Setby relax before the festivities.

Getting ready to join the procession out to Guion, Alex Hirbame prepares to escort Katherine Lindsey.

Enjoying their last Founder's Day, Ashley Henderson, Renece Brooks, Robyn Barto, Liz Gillgan, Amy Ross, And Caroline Edwards show their senior enthusiasm.

Singing in Tune

A tradition that took place this fall was step singing. This event was sponsored by the SGA. Jodi Szuszcwicz conducted the singing because she was the president of SGA. Each class had to come up with original songs to sing to the other three classes and to their own class. The songs were suppose to be "clean" and appropriate, but some songs were not. Many songs were to the tunes of popular songs, but the words were changed by class members. This year the freshman used the tune of "Like a Virgin" for their class song. The sophomores used "These Are the Days" as the tune for their senior song.

During step singing, the seniors with their robes on sat on the Golden Stairs facing the other classes. The freshman sat directly facing the seniors. To the left of the seniors were the Juniors and to the right were the sophomores. Singing began with the freshman and ended with the seniors. Each class sang their song to themselves last after singing to the other three classes. The words sung by one class to another class promoted problems. This happened between the sophomores and juniors during step singing this fall. The majority of the crying was done by the seniors because this fall was their next to last step singing.

Step singing provided a time to encourage bonding among members of each class. The members had to join together to write these songs. The goal in writing the songs was to see how degrading the song to the sophomores could be and how sad the song to the seniors could be. Step singing allowed the members of the SBC community to come together one afternoon to have a good time.

Learning their songs for their first step singing are Kathryn Cunningham and Connor Lewis.

Getting together before step singing starts on the Junior Bench are Kathy Johnston, Sarah Butcher, and Jill Butcher.

Gathering together for their last Fall Step Singing are seniors Susan Margaret Barret, Allison Vollmer, Wendy Wall, and Jamee Thompson.

Smiling because they finally have the privilege to sit on these stairs are select members of the senior class.

Holiday Hoopla

On Friday, November 12th, guests arrived from near and far to attend Sweet Briar's Holiday Hoopla on the 12th and 13th. Friday night the regga band Full Stop played with the theme being Christmas in the Caribbean. The Wailes Student Center was appropriately decorated to the theme. Saturday night BS&M played in Prothro Commons. The theme for that night was New Year's in New York. Prothro was filled with many streamers and balloons which at midnight were released with only minor difficulties. Students who paid the full price received a tee-shirt for themselves and for their dates and two shotglasses. Students, guests, and faculty all enjoyed themselves. Annette Dusenbury said, "the bands were great and Prothro Commons was a totally different place. It was also great having the faculty there." Lucretia Bock felt that "Fall Weekend was a night that didn't last long enough." Heather Benhard felt that "the whole weekend was great, the party lasted forever with the semi-formal on Friday and the formal on Saturday. It was fun to see everyone dressed up." Tonya Bradley had "a wonderful time and it helped us prepare and get in the mood for the holidays, it also made everyone at Sweet Briar closer." The whole weekend was a success and everyone is looking forward to next time.

Dancing the night away, Cristy Jordan and Katherine Scupp groove to the music of Full Stop.

Laughing at something, Cory Micier holds on to Heather Benard for support.

Enjoying the beautiful weather down at the boathouse, Patty, Ali Chance, Stephanie, Lee, and Heather spend the afternoon with their dates at a private Fall Weekend party.

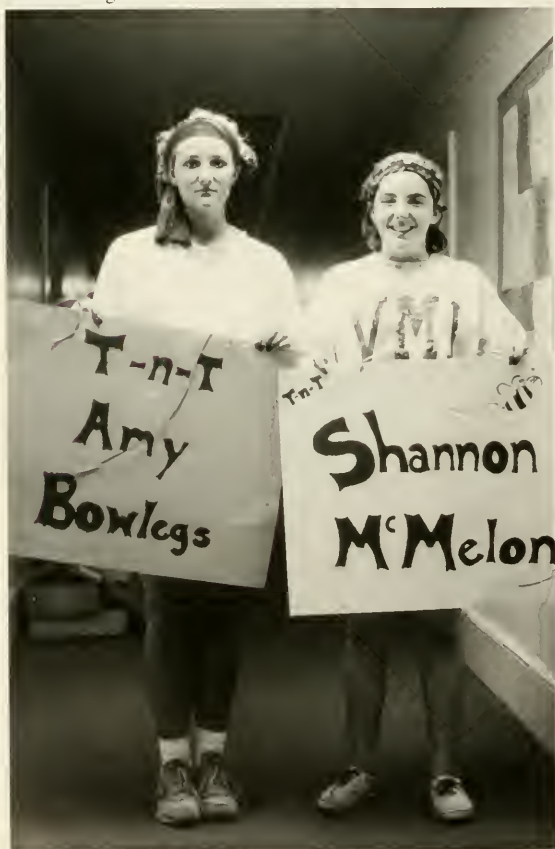

Taking a minute to relax, Ticia Harbour, Maia Pearson, Kathryn Cunningham, and their dates spend the evening together.

In The Silence of the Night

There is a knock at your door. They have come to get you. As long as you can make it through tonight and tomorrow, you'll be one of them. Excitement fills you. Being tapped is not only an exciting experience, but a fun one as well. The initiation is kept a secret by everyone who takes part. Once initiated, membership is complete and you can call yourself a member of the club, an honor that is not given out to everyone. Tapping is one of the few activities at Sweet Briar in which a member is chosen and not able to sign up for. Tap Clubs include QV's, Bum Chums, Paints and Patches, and Aint's and Asses. The tapplings are remembered with fond memories and lots of laughs.

Showing off her goddess garb, new Paint and Patches member CeeCee Valentine waits in the quad.

Displaying their signs new Taps and Toes members try to keep their energy up after a long night.

Gathering together, these new Sweet Tones show off their outfits that they had to wear as part of their initiation.

Hiding their faces so they cannot be identified are some of the QV's during their initiation.

R-E-S-P-E-C-T

There was one thing that both freshman and sophomores had in common this year, it was the fear of scrubbing. The Senior Doors, Senior Steps, and Junior Bench were constantly scrubbed this year by Freshman, but there was one instance that brought the two classes together to scrub. For anyone who has ever had to scrub, they will assure you that it was an experience that they cared not to repeat.

Within the first few weeks of classes, there were several scrubbing that had Freshmen scraping the dirt that had accumulated all summer with their toothbrushes. The Seniors had these girls singing as they were drenched with water and shaving cream. The Juniors also had several "lucky" Freshmen peeling off the layers of summer scum with their toothbrushes as well. Those who had to scrub the Bench were also drenched in various liquids and made to sing random songs. In one instance a former cheerleader was told to do some of her jumps.

There were many people who disliked the scrubbing, and there were others that loved them. The victims of the Juniors and Seniors were first embarrassed, and then praised for playing the game. The songs of "Respect" and "Holla" now haunted the various steps, doors, and bench, waiting for the next group to ruin their toothbrushes.

Returning from their scrubbing, Angelia Johnson and Courtney Totushek display their soap and shaving cream covered bodies.

Scrubbing the Senior Doors, Marion Johnson, Alexa Schiempf, and Allison Hall get doused in shaving cream.

It was a warm night when the Freshmen gathered together in the parlor of Grammar ready for a fight. They wore war paint and old clothes ready to get drenched in paint. Once in the quad, positions were taken. There was an offense, a defense, and a super-defense circling the hitching post trying to cover it with their bodies. From above, upper classwomen and friends took pictures and cheered them on. The paint was brought out, the rules were explained, and then it was over. Before anyone could blink an eye the Freshmen had dumped the Sophomore paint, all over the rock. The Class of '97 had won and yelling and cheering could be heard all over the quad, letting everyone know who had won.

Getting ready to meet with everyone in Grammar parlor. Cory Meier, Amanda Acuff, Julia Ingelido, Nessim Al-Yafi, Alicia Allen, Alexa Schriempf, Sarah Betz, Lucinda Polley, Amy Earehart, Angelia Johnson, and Ann McDonald are prepared to fight for the rock.

Hanging from the balcony over the rock, a '97 banner displays the class spirit.

Fighting over the paint, both classes try to tip the garbage can to win the game.

Look At Those Robes

One of the traditions at Sweet Briar that involved both the Freshman and Senior classes was robe decorating. Each member of the Senior class had a robe which they had received from a member of the previous graduating class. Many of the Seniors got their robes from a close friend, which made the robes even more special.

All of the robes were black, but every robe was different because each had a combination of miscellaneous things on it. Items such as buttons, pins, bows, and ribbons could be seen on the robes. These decorations were on the outside, and pockets were on the inside. Both the pockets and items remained on the robes as the robes were handed down from one Senior class to another. The longer the robe had been around, the more pockets and items it had.

During the first month of school, the Freshmen class had a meeting for each First-Year student to choose a Senior. The Freshman called their Senior and arranged a time to pick up the robe. It was the Freshman's responsibility to decorate the robe however she wanted. The items that were put on must be easy to remove, because there would be times when the robes were worn without anything on them.

The first time that the Seniors wore their robes was on Founder's Day. There were other times throughout the year when they wore the robes, such as on the twenty-second of every month, in anticipation of graduating on the twenty-second of May. Another time that the Seniors got decked out was when there was a scrubbing.

The tradition of robes allowed for the First-Year students to become friends with a Senior early in the year. Some of these friendships were very special to both the Seniors and Freshmen.

Taking pride in her work, Allison Hall is congratulated by Kim Mounger for decorating Kim's robe.

Joining her Senior, Alex Stewart, Sarah Betz enjoys her first Step Singing with an assortment of Seniors and Juniors.

On the Road Again...

Each and every Friday afternoon, the parking lots emptied out. Almost everyone hit the road after classes to begin their weekend roadtrip. The endless question that usually filled most minds was where to go. For those who opted for the short journey, Hampden-Sydney, Washington and Lee, Virginia Military Institute, Lynchburg College, Longwood College, and the University of Virginia were the usual choices by many. For those who dared to venture further, the opportunities were endless.

Many had a favorite school that served as their weekend getaway. When asked where her favorite party school was, Tyler Louthan replied, "W&L, because they have the best music, the best places to dance, and the best variety of guys." A lot of students chose to go to a school because of their boyfriend or just their friends.

When sick of the nearby college scene, students often headed for some fun and excitement elsewhere. Some returned home while others ventured to D.C. for clubbing or the big city scene. Georgetown and Richmond were among others that also attracted adventure seeking students. Many also tended to venture out of state to visit friends at other colleges or family. Courtney Totushek's words of wisdom on roadtrips was to "beware of deer and cops." Gretchen Conova's advice to all was to "bring good tapes because once you get into the mountains, it's all country." The possibilities were endless for those with a desire to travel and find amusement outside of Sweet Briar.

Journeying to New York for the weekend, Tanya Ketchum and Sherin El Banhaway went sight seeing at Rockefeller Center.

Bravely visiting the Exorsist Stairs, Kara Dickey, Cat Ehlen, and Leslie Toro spend their day in Washington, D.C.

Spending the day at the track, Liz Dunck and Bergen Hall traveled to the fall Foxfield at UVA for a Sunday afternoon.

Enjoying the H-SC Christmas Formal, Leighton and Susan Margaret Barret spend a weekend together.

Eating With Friends

Manicotti, Vegetable Lasagna, and Spicy Fries. The bells have rung five times and Prothro commons has opened its doors for business. Students gather for meals that are quickly eaten and pushed aside to make room for ice cream and fudge pie, and then, the conversation begins. Students have been known to gather in groups that are so large that everyone must "de- tray" to fit everyone at the table. Conversations can last until the sun has gone behind the hills and the staff are dimming the lights as a hint it is time to leave.

Stro cheeseburgers, chicken fingers, and mozzarella sticks. When students gather in the Bistro to the sounds of a band playing or just the radio blarring, they are there to have fun as well as to eat. Sitting under the banners of their class, students eat their food, talk with friends, and dance on their chairs. The Bistro is a place to relax with friends and get away from the everyday cares of a Sweet Briar student.

Eating together in the Bistro, Margaret Jenkins, Anne Kelley, Kerri Rawlings, and Amy Goode enjoy the good food and good company.

Putting their minds to work, both students and a faculty member use "food for thought" during the Bistro Bowl.

Finishing up their dinners, Stephanie Hanson, Amy Biathrow, and Kim Mounger spend time talking about the latest news in Prothro.

Playing a game of cards, these students relax in the comfortable atmosphere of the Bistro during a cold winter night.

Lighting Up the Night

On the night of May 3, 1994, there was a slight mist of rain that lingered. As the many Seniors and underclassmen gathered, there was a question of whether or not the women would process around the quad or simply process into the chapel. Many were upset that the decision to process into the chapel was made, and so at the last minute, it was decided to process around the quad and then into the chapel. After everyone had settled the underclassmen sang the traditional Sweet Briar songs. Many Seniors were tearful because the event signified the beginning of their last activities at Sweet Briar.

After the event, everyone met outside to have their pictures taken with friends and lantern bearers to capture the beautiful baskets on film. The baskets and candles ranged from large to small. Some were full of spring flowers while others consisted solely of roses. No matter what the baskets looked like, and no matter how bad the weather was, everyone who attended had a marvelous time.

One Last Time - Spring

Step Singing

The Seniors came early to get their seats on the Golden Stairs. There were Freshmen in Grammar parlor practicing and trying to get their songs on key and in tempo. There were sophomores in Glass parlor waiting anxiously to find out who the QV's had been. The moment arrived quickly, too quickly for some of the Class of 1994. The songs to the seniors were full of love and admiration. Behind the dark sunglasses that they all wore were tears of happiness and sadness. It was their last step-singing as students at Sweet Briar. More tears were shed as the QV's were revealed and sighs of relief could be heard as the game was called to an end. Mary-Byrd Schroeder was introduced to the student body as the new SGA President for the 1994-1995 school year and she was welcomed by the students who sat upon the grass and bricks in front of the stairs. The afternoon of singing was enjoyed by everyone who attended, but will always be remembered by the Class of 1994 as their last time to sing on the Golden Stairs.

Hugging a fellow QV, Jen Beck is relieved that the game has finally come to an end.

Gathering one last time before their sister class, the Sophomores sing their song of admiration to the Class of '94.

Getting ready to sing their song to the Senior Class, many Juniors realize that this will be the last time that they will singing to a senior class.

Preparing for the singing, Lia DeSimone ponders a question from a classmate.

Dog Days

It seemed to be at times that one could not get out of Prothro without being approached for food by one of the lovable campus dogs. There were those that were regulars on campus and then there were occasional strays that wandered around, looking for attention. The majority of the dogs were owned by either professors or staff on campus. It was not an unusual sight to see a professor and his or her dog walking into Benedict before the start of class. The animals are treated with respect and love by not only the faculty and staff, but by the students as well. On warm days in the quad students could be seen playing with the dogs or reading a good book with one curled up at their side. The dogs came to know who they could get food from, much to their owner's dismay. Towards the middle of the year signs were put around Prothro asking not to feed certain dogs because they were becoming too fat.

The love that was shown towards the dogs only reflects that the students of Sweet Briar are true animal lovers. They are willing to call the local vet to help strays find their way home, feed an occasional nibble to a begging dog, and take walks with them panting along side. Without the many dogs that spend their days in the quad, many students would not feel as at home as they do when they are at Sweet Briar. The dogs are a reminder of the love that they have for their own animal, waiting at home patiently for their owner to come back from school.

Showing how well they get along, one of the dalmatians and C'namon share a kiss in the quad.

Taking a rest, one of the dalmatians spends its afternoon in the warm sun with his friends.

Taking a moment to pet Cinnamon, a student cannot avoid the lovable creature as she walks out of Randolph.

Sitting in the shade of a car, Whiskers waits to catch the attention of a student.

Breaking Away

- Spring Break '94

In early March there was an expectation of beautiful weather and an end to winter, an expectation that was not fulfilled by Mother Nature. Instead, a layer of ice covered Sweet Briar, making everyone yearn even more for their Spring Break. Some students went to the Bahamas, Cayman Islands, and various other warm spots across the country. There were others who ventured north and west to go skiing and catch the final runs of the season. Still others found themselves with the comforts of home around them, seeing old friends and family. The variety of events that took place over Spring Break were creative and interesting to hear. There were those who ventured to Elvis's Graceland and experienced the life of a tourist. There were those who went sailing in the Bahamas with SWEBOP and got to experience what it was like to do some serious sailing.

Some Seniors went apartment hunting and others went job hunting. It was at this time that the idea of graduating and living in the real world began to sink in for many.

A lot of students who had not been home since January break or winter break and decided to go home and see their family. It was a chance for them to relax and see friends.

The idea of Spring Break was refreshing during the stressful mid-terms and freezing nights without electricity during the ice storms. It was the symbol of the beginning of the end of the term. To the Seniors, it was the realization that graduation was only two months away and that the real world was waiting for them.

Spring Break was a great break from the everyday studies and stress.

Spending time in the sun on a boat, Kim Bramley and Gretchen Canova enjoy the heat of the Bahamas.

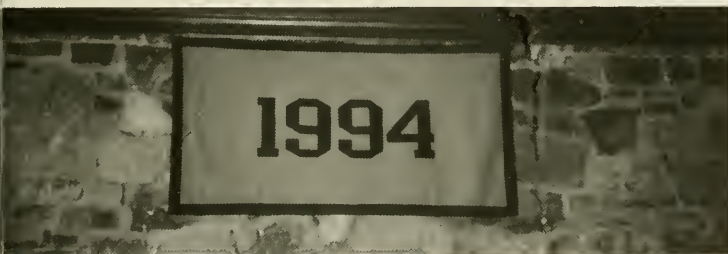

Standing in front of Graceland, Kathy May, Susan Perdue and her boyfriend, Katie Blaik, and Alex Stewart take in the tourist attractions.

Resting in front of Lake Tahoe, Kat Bohannon and Cristy Benson spend some time taking in the natural beauty it has to offer.

SENIORS

From the moment they arrived on campus, they realized that things would be different this year. They were the Class of '94 and it was their turn to sit on the stairs, walk through the doors, hang their banner over the fireplace in the Bistro, make vulnerable Freshmen scrub, and decorate (or trash) the Juniors rooms on the night of the banquet. The year would go quickly for some and drag on forever for others. Nevertheless, it would be a year that could not be forgotten. Many spent all four years at Sweet Briar, while others joined somewhere in the middle, but the Class of '94 shares many memories that will be cherished forever and reflected on with smiles of happiness.

"I learned a little in college," I said.

"Like what?" he said.

It was a fair question. And one that certainly didn't lack for answers. I had learned to read a book without hating author for writing it. I had learned how to drink beer through a funnel, and to make a quick joke that people would remember before falling down. I learned the meaning of words like epistemology and ontology. I learned how to go out on a first date, and to never show up for a last date. And that lovers lie, simply as a matter of course.

I learned that everyone thinks they've sinned somehow, but in the end it doesn't matter. Because the strongest feelings--guilt, shame, regret, love--last the shortest time. That what you suffer most is the long and placid emptiness those feelings leave in their absence.

But I also learned that nothing you can say is ever anything more than a fuzzy, verbal shadow of the knowledge you keep in your heart. So I just said, with calculated ambiguity, "I learned to cry."

Freshman year- 4th floor Glass! We weren't just a hall-we were a family! Sophomore year-Gray- the last of the great parties - nice to come home and find people partying when we weren't even there! Remember Stevie Wonder?! That was a good time! Fripp- I'll always love you. Thanks for the memories. Junior year-hell or heaven? You decide. 2nd family-DEW! Corrinne- the wonder RA of the world- the quad - I love you guys! Then the triple-oh my, slumber parties on my king sized bed-yahah! Jr. Banquet-we had fun, I think. SPRING BREAK - hm. Senior year had come and gone too fast - are we all grown up now? To the pack- "I always knew that looking back on the tears would make us laugh..never did I think looking back on the laughter would make us cry."

Ali - I know we have gone and come together like the wind- but never forget that I love you.

BABY JESS AND TWIN - carry on the tradition next year! We are the best!

WKW - farkus fatback wallet friend - wounded sister, lean on my shoulder when I'm strong - there will come a time too, I will need to lean on you - that's why the Lord make us friends. I love you.

Mom, Dad, and Shana - I know that it hasn't been the easiest, putting up with me, but y'all are very close to my heart and as far as I'm concerned the best family I could ever want. I love you - thanks for always understanding! FINALLY ON MY OWN! THANK YOU, SWEET BRIAR, FOR EVERYTHING!

True to my nature I have left this until the last minute, and I find myself with ten minutes to express to my good friends how they have enriched my life, ten minutes to thank my professors for their knowledge and mentorship.

But most difficult of all, I must, in only a few lines, pay due respect to the strength and vigor of the two exceptionally brave women. One is my grandmother. The second is my mother, a woman so talented and versatile that not only has she been an inspiring mother, she has been a hell of a dad too.

Ah God, Mary! There's this stretch of road where there's nothing for miles, and at the end of the day, I was like, "Wharr!" "Wekk, Jesus Christ, to you, too!" said my friend James. And as Kafleen fixed her gorgeous hair she said, "Have you met my friend Paul?" "Yes, I think so," said Flakemama, and fruitbat gave him a jolly poster. Freshman year....picnics and The Megaphonics in the dell, living in Reid and studying in the "soothing" yellow parlor, skiing with frozen hair, thanks Kathy May for the "interesting" birthday present. Back for sophomore year or shall I say PARTY year? Almost saw me nude with Revenge of the Non-Nerds. Bo kept us company in Glass 212, while Dawg was the man in Glass 318, FOXFIELD here we come with the Sigma Nu boys to keep us two-fisted, painting the rock, Brown (Blue, Green) Eyed Girl, Williamsburg was fun even though those Republican boys couldn't drink, Spring Foxfield and Formal Weekend then Phoenix here I come with "I can't use the rest room at a gas station." Junior year was spent abroad with different friends but lots of fun and good memories. Back at Sweet Briar for Senior year. Things have changed, but I still love it here. New and old friends, party in the basement, love those hicks at the bars, senior traditions, Cafe France, Lay Reading, Fall Weekend with friends, Christmas presents in November! Graduation, here I come!

Thank you to my family, I could not have made it without your's and the Lord's support.

"Do Right and Right Will Follow"

These were the words taught to Dorothy Jones Sales by her father, Sterling Jones; repeated over and over from the time she was little until he died at the age of 84. And these are the words Dorothy Sales has lived by all her life.

If you ask Dorothy who is the person she most respected in her life, she'll answer without hesitation: "My father, who was an all-around good man."

Dorothy's father, Sterling Jones, worked at Sweet Briar before the college even existed, helping to fire the bricks used in the early buildings. Then, after the college opened, he worked on campus until his retirement in 1958.

Sterling Jones was greatly respected by all who knew him. Dorothy compares him to former President of Sweet Briar College, Dr. Harold B. Whiteman. Like the President, her father had great dignity and would greet everyone he met with a courtly bow. When you hear Dorothy talk about her father, it is easy to see how she was able to become the woman she is today.

Dorothy Lee Jones was born May 15, 1924, the second of two children born to Aurelia and Sterling Jones in a two-room log cabin behind the President's house. When she was four months old, she moved with her mother, father, and older sister, Louise, to Coolwell Road. Both her parents always worked at Sweet Briar, but Aurelia only worked part-time until her children were old enough for school.

Dorothy's summers were spent at Sweet Briar. When she was twelve, she helped a favorite professor, Ms. Belcher, wash bottles in the Chemistry lab. Her fourteenth summer found her hard at work for many of the professors, including Sociology Professor Bell Beard, for whom Dorothy was to work for the next thirty-two years.

As a young woman, Dorothy often spent her work-breaks listening to lectures on Anthropology and English on the steps outside the open windows of her favorite classrooms. She was fascinated by the differences between the many races of the world, but also with the good to be found in every culture. Later, after visiting Psychology classes, which she found just like Bible study, she commented, "You can read great things, but it is great to hear them explained."

In 1945, Dorothy Sales went to work full-time at the Book Shop where she remained until her retirement on May 15, 1994, her seventieth birthday. In 1987, she was honored by The Virginia College Book Store Association as the most outstanding college book shop employee in the state of Virginia.

Dorothy's greatest contribution to Sweet Briar College came during her Book Shop years, where she assisted thousands of students through their four years of "toil and pain." She was always there to help them find the textbooks and the supplies they needed. Visiting alumnae always came into the Book Shop to see Dorothy, because no visit would be complete without seeing her happy face and hearing of her latest adventures. She could carry on conversations with all professors, staff, and students, delighting them with her wisdom and warm sense of humor. She was always completely familiar with the Book Shop inventory, and she added that special touch to gifts with her famous Sweet Briar Bow. Dorothy brought real joy to the Book Shop, starting out each day on a happy note. She is a strong self-confident woman: a leader in her community and church, and devoted to her family and friends.

Dorothy Sales is truly a woman of the '90's, and, without a doubt a most honorable member of the Class of 1994. She is, above everything, a living example of the wisdom of her father's teaching: "Do right and right will follow you." - Rebecca Page Baker '94

Dorothy Lee Sales, we all: faculty, staff, students, and alumnae, love and respect you and will miss you greatly. You are truly an honor to our Class of '94.

Your fellow 1994 classmates

Quotes from colleagues and friends

"We can all attest to the fact that Dorothy's life has been spent in service to Sweet Briar College. Everybody enjoyed and loved her." - Ann Morrison Reams, '42, Retired Director of the Sweet Briar College Alumnae Association

"Dorothy Jones Sales not only belongs to Sweet Briar, but Sweet Briar belongs to her. It has been the center of life for her as well as her father and mother and other kin. And she has been an honorable member of the Sweet Briar family all her life." - Gertrude Prior, Retired Book Shop Employee

"Always with a smile on her face, Dorothy would brighten my day after a stressful afternoon of classes or an all night study session. She is one of the reasons I love Sweet Briar so much. Her warmth gave everyone the home town, neighborly feeling we needed when the chips were down." - Kimberly McGraw Euston, '92

"Dorothy has long been a valued member of the Sweet Briar community. She offers a smile so easily, and contributes so much good will." - Elizabeth F. Sprague, Retired Sweet Briar College Biology Professor

"Student, faculty, and presidents have come and gone in the past forty-eight years, but Dorothy has remained constant." - Toni Nelson, Friend of Sweet Briar College and wife of Professor Lawrence Nelson

"She (Dorothy) now deserves to enjoy the fruits of their long service and association with the college she loves and more importantly the love the college has for her." - Lydia C. KDaniel and Peter V. Daniel, IRetried Sweet Birar College Vice President

JUNIORS

The Juniors entered the year with newly declared majors and with graduation looking closer than ever. They had little sisters in the Freshmen class, and were eagerly wanting to get to know them. Towards the middle of the year, Junior Banquet preparations became the excitement and becoming seniors was almost a reality as they recieved their rings. Many were abroad in Europe while others were only three hours away in Washington D.C. To many the idea that the Junior Bench was now theirs was exciting. There were several scrubblings at the bench where the majority of juniors gathered to watch. The Class of '95 made many memories as they became an even greater part of Sweet Briar traditions.

It's Banquet Time!

The Wednesday night before Spring Break was an ordinary night to the Freshmen and Sophomores, but to the Seniors and especially the Juniors it was a night of excitement and chaos.

The theme for Junior Banquet was Margaritaville. Shirts and margarita glasses were sold ahead of time so that everyone would be ready for the big night. The banquet was held in the Wailes Student Center and the odes were read. The rings were given out and the excitement was felt. While these activities were taking place, the Seniors with the help of some underclassmen, decorated the Juniors rooms.

Some of the rooms were completely striped of the furniture and placed in the quad, parlors, and various other places around campus. Randolph parlor became the home to many beds and dressers that did not quite make it to the quad. The quad was home to about ten or fifteen beds and a few dressers.

The themes of the rooms varied from circus themes to porn houses, and from secret gardens to Mickey Mouse. The Seniors did a great job in being creative. Jill Goolsby's room was a salon with cedar chips all over the floor. Several rooms were done in beach themes with sand everywhere.

Junior Banquet night was also a night of partying. The Seniors supplied the alcohol to the Juniors, if they drank, as a gift. There were many Juniors who left coolers full of beer for their Seniors. Some also left a small gift of thanks. There were even Juniors who wrote desperate letters, asking for the rooms not to be trashed.

Those Juniors who actually found their beds that night, may have gotten some sleep, but many did not. There were people passed out or sleeping in the quad, in the parlors, and in friend's rooms. Few made it to classes the next morning because they were either sleeping, studying for a mid-term, or cleaning up Randolph after the threats that were given by Housekeeping. Underclassmen had their classes to themselves that morning after Junior Banquet.

Even though their rooms had been trashed, the Juniors recieved their rings and had a great time at their banquet. Some were heard vowing revenge on next years Juniors while others realized that this was the beginning of the end. The night was one that has been engraved in the memories of many, and will not be forgotten.

Hanging from an exit sign in Randolph, a misplaced nightgown both greets and thanks visitors for coming in.

It's Party Time!!

SOPHOMORES

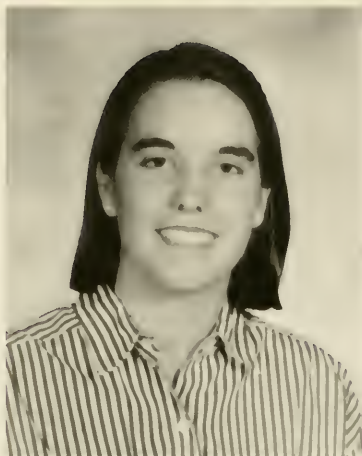

The year of the game. Ask any Sophomore what game and they will immediately answer the QV game. The QV's were tapped at the very beginning of the year and tried continuously to stay away from the Bums. For these girls and those who participated in the runs, their Sophomore year was definately memorable. For others it was special because they were no longer Freshmen. Some recieved cars to bring back to school after having a successful first year. The Sophomore class fulfilled its duties to the Seniors by escorting them on Founders' Day and during Latern Bearing. Some people at other schools might say that nothing really happens your Sophomore year; ask any Sophomore at SBC and they'll tell you otherwise.

Sneak Peeks of Sophomores

Be a Sophomore!*

Snap Shots of the Class of '96

FRESHMEN

The Class of '97 came in with the intentions of "rocking" Sweet Briar and in their first year, they did. They conquered the Sophomores in the Hitching Post Fight, renamed themselves "First Years," and petitioned for a better social life. Everyone in the community of Sweet Briar was made aware of their presence. These women were not going to wait until their senior year to start making things happen. The class bonded as they experienced the traditions and learned how to deal with college life. The memories were started and friendships were made. The Class of '97 made an impact on Sweet Briar, just as much as Sweet Briar made an impact on them.

Look At Those First - Years!

SPORTS

There are many students who participated in the sports program at Sweet Briar, whether it was for their love of sports or wanting to be part of a team. The uniforms that dotted the quad or the many cars that parked in Guion or at the riding center were a constant reminder of the part that sports played at Sweet Briar. On Saturdays there were always events taking place with students cheering on their friends or watching in silent awe. Whether one rode, swam, played in the outfield, or ran up and down the fields behind the gym, the students that were a part of the sports program shared a very exciting and special part of Sweet Briar.

ACTIVITIES

Many find that there were so many activities to get involved in that it was easy to become overcommitted. There are activities such as language clubs, but there are also ones that involve the government of Sweet Briar. Some of the clubs and organizations are strictly for enjoyment while others help prepare students for future careers. Still others were service oriented and helped out in the community. It seemed that there were so many organizations that there was one for every personality. Clubs and organizations helped bring together the people who shared the same interests and aspirations.

FACULTY

The faculty at Sweet Briar was not only a resource of vast knowledge and wisdom, but of friendship and guidance as well. There are many professors who put in extra hours to help students and give them their advice. Professors have been known to not only have extra study sessions but extra study break sessions as well. It is not uncommon to hear of students having pizza at a professor's house. The faculty challenges not only the minds of their students, but their attitudes towards the World as well. The faculty of Sweet Briar acts as a keystone to the future of not only the school, but of the lives of the women who attend it.

Dear Kathy, Alex, Stacey, and all of my Senior friends -

Thank you so much for making this year such a special one. I am so glad that we all got to be friends and share so many wonderful memories.

Kathy and Alex - Thank you for helping me make the decision to come to Sweet Briar! I will never forget the great times we had together. Remember, always keep the candy jar full and laughter is the best medicine.

Stacey - Thanks for being such a great WOW teacher and friend. You will make a great teacher! We had some great venting sessions, didn't we? Or is that a talent for gossip?

To all of my Senior friends - Thank you for making my first year at SBC so wonderful. Your advice has been valuable and definately taken to heart.

I wish you all only the best for your futures. Take care. Best Wishes.

*Friends forever,
Sarah Betz*

Colophon

The 500 copies of the 1994 BRIAR PATCH were printed by Jostens Yearbooks in Winston-Salem, NC using the lithography method. Our customer service advisor is John Fletcher and our representative is Eddie Huff.

The cover was designed by Jeff Reinhart at the Winston-Salem plant. The cover uses material 492 1st and two applied colors, 461 Plum and 327 Rich Gold. The cover is Craft Life Custom Embossed. The end sheets were also designed by Jeff Reinhart and use Cream 293 and are printed black. The 172 pages are printed on 80# Gloss paper.

All copy was typed on MacIntosh computers using the Jostens Yeartech software and Aldus Typestyler 4.0 and 4.2.

Candid photography was done by staff photographers Lori Bahret and Annette Dusenbury. Many pictures were submitted by the students of Sweet Briar College. Graduation pictures were taken by Larry Peters and Jerry Baker.

The portrait photography was done by Seagall -Majestic.

The Opening, Student Life, People, Patrons, and Closing sections were designed by Sarah Betz. The Activities section was designed by Christy Benson and the Sports section was designed by Courtney Totushek.

The Briar Patch would like to thank the Student Affairs Office, the Office of the Registrar, the faculty, the students of Sweet Briar, and the parents and patrons for their help and support of the book.

Leaving Sweet Briar...

...and Taking a Step in the Right Direction

The Journey has begun....

When I decided on the theme "A Step in the Right Direction," I was not only thinking of how it applied to the yearbook, but how it applied to life and Sweet Briar as well. The idea behind it was that the yearbook needed to get headed in the right direction. In recent years it had not come out on time and not been of good quality. I felt that the theme was appropriate in this sense, but when applied to a broader scale, it was even more meaningful. If you take the time to think about it, we are always trying to head in the right direction. As a Freshman, I personally am at the beginning of a journey, my college career. There are both Sophomores and Juniors who could apply the theme by saying they have come to a fork in the road and need to take that step in the right direction. Seniors have not only come to the end of the journey, but started another one almost simultaneously. Their journey is now one of life. It is hard to know what steps to take in order to get started in the right direction, but for many of us, Sweet Briar gives us the guidance and encouragement to take those first steps.

I would just like to thank everyone who helped with the production of this book. I would especially like to thank the Senior class for their patience and understanding. You all were just as excited over this book as I was and the enthusiasim helped tremendously. Thank you to Alex Stewart, Kathy May, Stacey Eisenberg, and the many other Seniors whose support I could not have done without. (Thank you Alice for sticking up for me!). Thank you Dean Barlow and the Student Affairs Office, without your copying and stuffing the mailboxes nothing would have ever gotten out! Dean Barlow, you are a great advisor. Thank you to Rebecca Baker in the Book Shop for your eagerness to help and constant praise. Thank you to all of the faculty heads who got their departments together for pictures.....I would not have had a faculty section without them! Without all of you, my job would have been even more frustrating and hectic than it already was!

A special thanks goes out to my staff who consisted of Lori Bahret, Mtesa Cottemond, Belinda Smith, Christy Benson, Annette Dusenbury, Courtney Totushek, Catherine Osuna, Melanie Vracas, and Lucinda Polley. Thank you all for your hard work, dedication, and patience. Thank you Lucinda, my roommate, for putting up with the constant phone calls about pictures, all the times I became frustrated, and all of your help.

A big thanks goes out to everyone who submitted pictures! Kim Szuszczewicz, Gretchen Canova, Laura Lechler, and Hilary Carlson who provided pictures with almost no notice. Thanks for your help!

I would also like to thank my parents for their help and support. They have put in many hours proof-reading and listening to the endless everyday problems that occur. Mom and Dad, thank you for believing in me.

Putting this book together has definately been a learning experience. I knew how to put a yearbook together after three years of it in high school, but I have learned so much more in this past year. I cannot begin to tell you how much I have enjoyed putting this book together for you. It is only the beginning. I will hopefully bring a bigger and better book to you again next year.

So in twenty years when you pull this book out of a box that is buried in the basement, read it, enjoy it, and remember the memories that you helped create.

Take care and I hope that this book helps you to remember the wonderful memeories that you helped create.
